

10 Artists Shaping the Future of Mexico City's Art Scene

by Diego del Valle Ríos
Feb 4, 2020

Ana Bidart

B. 1985, Montevideo

Fascinating everyday moments, like witnessing the passing of the day towards the night while immersed in a landscape, are central to the work of Ana Bidart. She makes drawings of space-time transitions we experience in the day-to-day: the opening of a door, the shadow of the sun sliding on the wall, the weight and power of a body, the subtlety of the wind blowing a sheet of paper. Her work questions the borders between fine art and performance; this allows her to do poetic experiments that challenge our perceptions of various art forms. She's described her work in her artist statement as "a sculpture that becomes a game, which in turn is a drawing and a time machine."